The title holder United States men's 4x100-meter transfer group won't vie for a decoration at the Tokyo Olympics in the wake of neglecting to progress as one of eight groups to the last out of Thursday's starter warmups.

The U.S. group of Trayvon Bromell, Fred Kerley, Ronnie Baker and Cravon Gillespie completed 6th in the second of two warmups in 38.10, falling two hundredths of a second shy of the last.

Dissatisfaction in the 4x100 transfer is a natural inclination for Team USA, notwithstanding trusts that a 2019 World Championships gold award had at long last exorcized the Americans' hand-off evil spirits which have existed for above and beyond 10 years.
